Children's Hospital Grand Rounds: a 4-

year experience. After reviewing procedures and changes that had taken place in the first 3 years of Children's Hospital Grand Rounds (CHGR) and considering the implications of its development for the future, the authors analyzed the fourth year of the CHGR. To do this, they analyzed the number of participants, topics, and locations, as well as the contributions of various professionals. The meeting was seen as a valuable part of the multidisciplinary team, with participants from a variety of specialties. There was an average of 11 professionals from the hospital who attended the CHGR each year. Topics varied, but there was a trend toward discussion of new areas of clinical research. As expected, there was a slight increase in participation from 2000 to 2001, but there was an overall decrease. The number of participants, topics, and locations changed somewhat each year. Only 32.5% of the attendees (around 56 persons per year) had been previously exposed to CHGR. Most of them had a secondary role, and 70% of the attendees came from the pediatric gastroenterology division. More children's hospitals are adopting the CHGR format, but they are providing a more diverse selection of professionals. DreamHack Sweden 2018 During DreamHack Stockholm in November, a limited number of tickets will be available for the friends of DreamHack and ESEA to get into the event with us. So if you want to have the same experience as the other attendees, you're in luck, as we have limited slots available. We are looking for friendly individuals to help us out. This means that we're looking for volunteers to help out during the event (for example to register tickets) and for people to help us with marketing and PR - everything related to helping our community grow! If you think you can do it, send us an email at or reach out directly to Jordan. We'll be looking for people to help with the following:

- Registering tickets
- Checking in and out attendees
- Marketing and PR
- Web design

Volunteers are asked to be available on
