This is my code: // GenericClass.h #ifndef GENERIC_CLASS_H #define GENERIC_CLASS_H template struct GenericClass { // GenericClass::member template Derived operator()(T2 v) const { return Derived(); } }; #endif // GenericClass.cpp // GenericClass::member template Derived GenericClass::operator()(T v) const { // I want to specialize this member function for a specific // type return Derived(); } So, what I want is to allow only Derived::operator()(T v) to be called on a GenericClass. To achieve this I try to specialize the member function, as explained in the comment. However, I get the following errors: GenericClass.h:24:47: error: expected constructor, destructor, or
