“We were blown away by how accurate this technology was and how the new system created looks and plays like a real football game,” said Jay Chou, Creative Director, EA SPORTS. “Adding hyper-reality to the gameplay gives players incredible freedom to move and interact in ways that would never happen in a real-life match, and ultimately makes them feel like a true football athlete.” In addition to the intuitive and realistic control systems, the motion capture data collected was used to train a new physics engine, allowing for the more precise control of ball movement, skilled movements, and aerial interactions. Additional features of FIFA 22 include: New Faces: Celebrating the great diversity of soccer, FIFA 22 adds new players from 18 different countries - nine from Africa, five from Asia and four from South America - bringing the total number of playable faces to over 400. New Player Data: Unlike past FIFA games, players are now shown in their real-life sizes and proportions, helping to bring the athletes to life in the most realistic way possible. New Deeper Chemistry: Deeper Chemistry tackles the physical, tactical, and psychological aspects of the game. Players are now more susceptible to psychological and unpredictable situations with deeper Chemistry, and can be influenced by rival tactics, coaches, and teammates in a similar manner to human behavior. New Rivalry System: A revamped Rivalry system allows players to share their achievements, compete against rivals in more aspects of the game, and even form or join a Rivalry group.

New Ultimate Team Card Catalog:
Introducing the all-new Ultimate Team Card Catalog, players can now design and add their own custom Ultimate Team Card and join a community of footballers to help them win the Ultimate Champions Cup.
