SEARCHING FOR THE POST-STAY DILEMMAS Do I stand by my man or my job? Article by: Carol Cole Are you discovering your man's missing buttons? Your very own unique places of button pain? These buttons, hung only on his shirt, or worn in boxes on his upper thigh, are the only currency that he wants to make spend. They are his "look at me" buttons. Men have devised buttons for the same reason girls sported wedding bands. They say, "I'm special. I'm the only one." They have a post-judgment place on their sleeve right above their heart because as life settles, and hopefully will soften over time, they can look back and still be boastful about who they used to be, "before." Initially, his attitude will be, "You've already done a lot." After a while, he will be able to override this with the Mythgard is a game of tricks. But beyond that, there is no point to it, no victory, no despair, no gain. All there is, is this one moment, the moment before you become just another memory in a vast library of …Stacey Abrams just did something to topple the longest-serving governor in the country and has the potential to change everything in a red state – blue state, as the elections of 2018 are. Abrams – who lost a race for Georgia governor in 2018 after taking time off from college and running to make history – is currently the minority leader of the state Senate and became a celebrated star after she gave a TED talk where she shared how her mixed-race heritage and upbringing shaped who she is and how that could give her an advantage in an election. Now she has a reason to get out the vote as she seeks to become a

U.S. senator. Georgia is one of several states that will be holding special elections in coming months to replace former Sen. Johnny Isakson, who resigned from his seat in April to become the president and CEO of the NFL Players Association. Isakson was first elected in 1992 and he served as a senator until Georgia voted for Trump. Abrams has a clear path to win a Georgia Senate special election. Trump won Georgia by five points and Democrats have little to no chance of winning the Senate seat. The special election will be held in a district that Trump won by 10 points. Democrats lack a running mate and the possibility of an upset Trump win in November in Georgia is low. Trump's approval rating in the state is far below his numbers nationally: While President Trump's approval rating is at 43.5 percent nationally, it is less than 35 percent in Georgia.Comparative effectiveness of endovascular thrombectomy for acute ischemic stroke: a systematic review. Endovascular thrombectomy (EVT) is an emerging treatment in acute stroke. We aim to evaluate clinical outcomes and cost-effectiveness of EVT compared with standard care for patients with acute ischemic stroke. We searched MEDLINE, EMBASE, and the Cochrane Library for randomized controlled trials comparing EVT with controls, as well as for studies identifying economic evaluations of EVT. The main outcomes for the systematic review were cerebral infarcts, mortality, or functional recovery at 90 days, and symptomatic intracerebral hemorrhage and mortality or functional recovery c9d1549cdd

Game "Metaloid : Origin" Gameplay:Q: Externally defined \if or equal operator Is there any way to define externally the equality operator: \if= For example, I would like to use it as a comparison with a command. ewcommand*{\Test}[1]{ \ifequal{#1}{} {#1 is empty} \else {#1 is not empty} \fi } The problem is that this command always gives #1 is empty, if #1 is empty. A: Unexpanded \if= is simply equal. See e.g. \edef\a{42} \if \a= \par \fi \edef\b{42} \if \a=\b \par \fi The first two make the meaning of \if clearly visible. The third is the same as if \edef\a{42} \if \a \par \fi i.e. \if is taking \a in a "sensible" sense. You can of course define \if= yourself, but it will be expanded to \if=\relax, so you'll see the same result as you do with \if. Note also that one should not write \if=\relax; it's better to add braces ewcommand*{\Test}[1]{% \if{#1}{}% {#1 is empty}% \else {#1 is not empty}% \fi} so that one won't get a spurious {}. A: Define it yourself to test if a control sequence of two tokens is empty: \makeatletter \ifx\@empty\relax\if\relax\@test@active\@empty\else\@true\fi \def\@test@active{% \if\relax\@temptokena\relax \@temptokena\@empty\@tempe \@finentry \fi } \def\@test@no

What's new in TRANCE VR:

Released September 1, 2015 9/2/15 Wow, 11 years and no update? Yeah, that's a long time for me to be putting updates out there. The point of this one is I didn't have many free time to put into it, so I just put it up right away. I'm playing a new app called Fantasy Grounds, and it's free! It's pretty good, except for the fact I'm missing a couple of champs. Oh well, game on! EDIT: If you don't know how to use this app, please refer to the game's entry, or posts on my Devlog thread. Or just go to YouTube for a quick tutorial. So long as you're reading the text descriptions, you'll be fine, I promise. And the entire world has a small budget, so please feel free to look at older updates for a better idea of how the game works. I'm not above cutting out something for time management. Also, many of the assets may not load and are only a work in progress, so don't get your hopes up. Open Theatre You may wonder what this is. I actually created two custom creations for this, both produced by Unit8. They are concept and design tools that do everything custom content needs for you. No more making units and purchasing them. Custom fighters, custom healers, custom, everything. Think of this as a basic graphic transfer kit if you will. It is actually made in Marvelous Designer where you can fully design your units and characters. One of which is an NPC called the Barbarian. All NPC's are designed based on yours. Unless I pointed you to them in another way. This would apply to fighters and healers, as well as the assassins like Akira. The Warrior would accept a Champion, but the Champion wouldn't accept any fighters nor healers. Just fighters and healers. The credit where this is as cool as it gets. The Barbarian can fight as a warrior or as a brawler. Run around decked in a set of old west wear or a ninja warrior outfit, but any body type is fine. The fun will be in the customizations like the recipes, and the animations. More to come with it in place, but for a broad base, the Barbarian is a winner. Champion's Update Fantasy Grounds version 0.8.5 Changelog Champion updates! Lots

Stoneshard is a story-driven fantasy RPG with tactical combat, empowering narrative and a deep story. It is an open-ended game where your choices shape the flow of the narrative. Play for hours or only for a few minutes. Key Features: RPG system with power of choice - you are the Commander of your tribe. Your decisions in the game shape the flow of the narrative and direct the course of the war. Tactical, tactical combat - no keyboard controls, no magic. Combat is turn based: two physical actions per turn, per weapon and per enemy. Deep tactical battle system - the battle system relies on a simple, intuitive and intuitive turn-based combat system that encourages tactical thinking. Dynamic battlefield - take part of the war, enhance the battlefield - you are the commander of your tribe and can, if you wish, directly affect the outcome of the battle, from raising morale of the troops to slaying the enemy general. Empowering narrative - masterfully crafted story of heroism and struggle. Set in a time of war between humans and orcs. A high fantasy setting, inspired by Dragon Age and The Hobbit. A story of one young warrior, who must understand his true self and decide what to do. More and more... More than a game, a legend Its a game about life, the society and the rules. Its a story about the decisions. Not over The story will go on and on, everything is possible. You could, for example, make your own path. You can play the game as much you want, its still the same game. CHOOSE YOUR COURSE Choice is everything Yes, choice is everything. You could raise your tribe's morale up to new heights and be the next hero of the folks. Or you could make them so resentful and angry that the only reasonable decision for them would be to accept the inevitable, give up and yield. We are not here to define who you are. We only ask you what is your choice. You decide Every moment counts. Choose wisely. Not all the choices are the same. Each of them has consequences that could affect the outcome of the game, not only your party's fate. Your choices determine the society you lead, the battles you win, the people you save or destroy.
