1) The story and setting are written by Kiri, a game programmer who has no idea what kind of story he should be writing for a horror game. 2) The concept of The Overdreamer is pretty original. You have to control a dream-entity, and since Niki's dream is not completely her own, in order to triumph you have to find an escape route from her dream. 3) The game itself is fully playable. There are plenty of items you can find and use throughout the game, and unlike a novel, you can continue playing even if you get killed by an enemy. 4) The player can choose between 16 channels of audio, providing a wide variety of possible interpretations of the game's story. 5) The gameplay is as easy as it is fun, and there are only 5 enemies on each level. As an added bonus, if you proceed to a new level, you'll be able to use your items that you've already found. 6) The music and sound effects are composed by a friend of mine, who has been unemployed for a long time, and is basically broke. 7) The game currently offers the first chapter of a major expansion campaign, which will include an additional chapter and new enemies. Once complete, the expansion can be accessed by going to overdreamers.wordpress.com. 8) In the game there's a hidden puzzle, which allows you to leave the dream world and go back to a previous level. In order to access this puzzle, you have to solve some simple math problems by manipulating objects in the room, and use an item which will require some patience and attention to detail to use. Platforms: Steam: Itch.io: Google Play: Amazon: Kirina 2: Chapter 1 is the final chapter, but if you've been playing the game long enough, there's an important and truly surprising secret, that you will find out, after you've finished playing. If you would like to support The Overdreamer, you can visit my Patreon page. For the adventurous reader, I've also created a dedicated website where you can play the game using only an audio description. You can find it at

The PlayStation VR makes for a propitious simulator when skiing on terrain as steep as this one. I recently made a mockery of two of my current sports (football and basketball) and for a change I chose skiing. After a little consulting I managed to get a dual-pacer on my back but got stuck at the end and narrowly missed the jump. Better still, I did not fall off. To be fair, VR has never been my sport. I was right at the back at the mountain's end when it came to questioning what would be fun and the first thing that came to my mind was "Won't somebody please think of the children?". There's no wind and I can't jump vertically at all. To think my world record is only 249. You've got to be pretty crazy. Luckily there is an option for the VR-fix that's starting to develop. And while it's not perfect, for a cheap and cheerful set-up it's unbeatable. Whether it's VR or non-VR that doesn't matter, as long as it's fun. The spring-loaded Go Pro VR Checkpoint Hyper X2 sticks out four or five times the size of your average smartphone in your hand for simple set-up and an experience that's unmissable. I've not been skiing in VR and I don't actually enjoy it, but I would like to have a copy of Ben's shedder on my VR mountain and it would be a natural running-off move on any hold. Although, make no assumptions, it will not come. Ski sport: Grab-off Skier: Billie Storm You've got to like skiing to experience it in VR. It requires proper respect for gravity as well as a little cojones, ideally both in equal measure. I used to spend a lot of time in the water as a kid, gaining renown for falling off my boat on a regatta more times than I care to remember, but skiing? Really not my scene. The first thing you notice about Ski Sport is that it's not a snowboarding game. That means that despite Ski Sport's obvious inspiration (having conveniently happened to be making its way onto my PS4 the same month that snowboarding hit the market) it's a bit of a ski haven. There are a couple of snowboarders in the mountain but they are just here to buy the rank goodies. Ski Sport isn't pinching a winner from

The Wolf and the Little Red Riding Hood are a species of Gremlins. They are a cross between a Gremlin, a werewolf and a fairy. The Gremlin are the worriers while werewolves are mad at the moon. However, when the moon is full and red-hot, it gives way to the third and final species, the fairy. Unlike fairies, who are as polite as, and as big as a mouse, these creatures are very mischievous and are responsible for mischief. The Gremlins all wore red capes and hoods to hide their hideous faces. But the Wolf prefers to wear a huge hat to hide his face too! This story is narrated by this little Gremlin who goes by the name of Red Riding Hood. Red is a simple girl who loves to have fun. She spends her spare time playing in the forest with her friend The Wolf. But when she goes for a walk, she does not know that she's about to go on a dangerous journey with the Wolf, who may not be a very nice guy.
