As more and more companies start embracing the ideas behind Creative Commons (and licensing them), many are asking what you can do. In many ways, this article shows how you can encourage them to embrace the free knowledge movement even more. You can leave this article as a resource for this and others. Over the last few years, the idea of "free knowledge" has been gradually understood and celebrated by a growing number of people. It's well known that the early internet was a giant public commons, where all of us could freely share the knowledge we were developing. As more and more people realized the power of what the idea of free knowledge suggested, the idea became more important than ever. Mozilla and the Creative Commons While both Mozilla and the Creative Commons have embraced some of the ideas behind free knowledge, there are still many more questions that remain to be answered. In this blog post, I'll try to give more details on how you can help push these two organizations to embrace the free knowledge movement even more. There are lots of questions to be answered, but there's still a lot that's been done over the years that can be used for inspiration. Mozilla and the Firefox OS Mozilla is one of the biggest known advocates for open and free knowledge. They have many programs and initiatives that can be used as a basis for doing the right thing, and the Creative Commons movement is just one of them. A big part of their identity is that it's "open source". Firefox OS is the project that can

The first pair, above, features all four Ghostbusters - Dan Ackroyd, Harold Ramis, Bill Murray, and Rick Moranis - as they all returned to their old stomping grounds in the original 1984 movie. And in the other image, above, the quartet can be seen when they let loose after escaping an embarrassing situation with their colleagues on a conference call. The original Ghostbusters movie, directed by Ivan Reitman, was a worldwide smash in 1984 and spawned a top-grossing sequel, which in turn spawned a star-studded 2017 reboot in which both Melissa McCarthy and Kristen Wiig played Egon and Ray's wives, respectively. The new version, which is the first theatrical production to feature Melissa McCarthy, Kristen Wiig, and Leslie Jones in a leading role, premiered in July at the New York Film Festival and has not yet received a full release, although it is currently available in some theaters. But the movie has already made a beeline for the box office, grossing over $226 million worldwide in its first two weekends

I am trying to load dynamic images from the RAM memory with opencv on android. I can access the images from the ROM memory. But as I have RAM memory on the device, I want to load them from RAM. I saw few things about jniOpenCV, but as far as I am not getting that where to use the cvLoadImage from the jniOpenCv? Is it the only way or a way in jniOpenCV to achieve this functionality? A: You should just use the standard cvLoadImage. It does what you want. cvLoadImage will load the image to host of the OpenCV image class. If you don't have access to the OpenCV image class, you need to use the OpenCV native interface, that is cvLoadImage. A: For those who'd like to use 'cv::Mat' to store the images, you can use cv::Mat.setTo. You can also load the image from OpenCV's native memory by using cvLoadImage, but that can fail with some errors. Q: SimpleDateFormat alternative/enhancement I have 2 classes, say A and B which are not related directly. Class A is just a way to store the creation and update dates of Class B. All I need is to update the creation date of A from a date returned from B. I am using SimpleDateFormat as follows

SimpleDateFormat sdf = new SimpleDateFormat("yyyy-MM-dd HH:mm:ss.SSS"); String newDate = sdf.format(b.getCreatedDate());
a.setCreatedDate(newDate);

However I was wondering whether there was a better approach to this problem? A: Yuu.java.sun.org.apache.xerces.internal.util.DateFormatSymbols is a base class for the SimpleDateFormat and provides a whole family of methods for working with date/time tokens. Please take a look at it and at the related classes in Apache. DateFormatSymbols will give you instances of a way to easily work with time/date/timezone strings. It's all
