Those issues can be resolved amicably because they are political in nature. Non-negotiable issues are a serious matter in the Arab world. Resolving such issues may help strengthen our countries' relationships with the Arab states and prevent a second front from opening. However, many Arab members of the U.N. Security Council would have loved to use the Lebanon Crisis as an opportunity to confront Israel on the "Non-Negotiable" issues. In fact, the list of the "Non-Negotiable" issues within the context of the region's internal policies and national security ranges from the future of the Palestinian state, the future of the Gaza Strip, the security of the Sudanese regime, the future of Darfur, the Middle East's nuclear issue, the "State of the Palestinians" and the Palestinian question in general and the Israeli West Bank barrier in particular. Some Arab countries and the U.N. secretary- 6d1f23a050
