179. In this context, progress is dependent on a better understanding of the relationship between forces and systems, the acceptance of the fact that the large-scale development of a society requires global coordination, and that such coordination presupposes global institutions. There is a need for a political and legal framework which will facilitate the implementation of such coordination, and provide a wider platform for world organizations and intergovernmental bodies. Different cultures which are essentially different must be able to live together freely in a world in which all other cultures are respected. A global community must be shaped by the rules of every culture, which includes the rule of law. The universal right to life, and the norms of democracy, should be accepted in every part of the world. SALTSAVA: The end product of this process shall be the complete collection of texts in the classifier, with the accompanying key. However, it is very possible to train a slightly different set of models using an alternate corpus, and even train them in a different machine. (4) For through-wall cracks, the licensee shall perform the analyses required by paragraph (e)(1) of this section using the methodology and statistical data provided to the licensee by the Director in accordance with paragraph (d)(2) of this section or by any other method the Director deems appropriate. (6) The licensee shall comply with the following requirements in the preparation and submission of neutron fluence maps for qualification testing and for routine vessel qualification testing of the through-wall crack risk potential.
